The press announces the arrival in Istanbul of Admirals Nomura and Abe, respectively Japanese Naval Attaches to Berlin and Rome where they were joined by two other Japanese diplomats named ^{Ishita} Haisita and Funaki. Admiral Nomura stressed the private character of his visit.

In reply to inquiries by newspaper correspondents
the Japanese Naval Attaché in Istanbul stated that the visitors had come to Turkey to acquaint themselves with conditions and that the visit had no connection with Germany. In reply to a question as to whether the Germans had sent his compatriots to Turkey to offset Willkie's visit the Japanese Naval Attaché replied, "The visit has no connection with Germany. Japan is not a vassal of Germany."

My dear Mr. Secretary:

There will be found enclosed a paraphrase of a telegram dated November 24, 1944 from Mr. Eden to Lord Halifax dealing with the possibility of asking Turkey to sever diplomatic relations with Japan. In handing this message to an officer of the Department the representative of the British Embassy made it clear that the comments of the British Ambassador in Ankara had not yet been received regarding it.

I will appreciate your views as to the desirability, from the point of view of the Navy Department, of asking the Turks to sever diplomatic relations with Japan, and I am addressing a similar letter to the Secretary of War.

If agreement is reached that a break in Turco-Japanese relations would contribute to the war effort, the Department will consult Ambassador Steinhardt with a view to achieving this end. Indications are that the Turkish Government would be willing to fulfill any reasonable request made to it by the American and British Governments.

Sincerely yours,

E. Stettinius, Jr.

Previous objections to idea of requesting Turkish Government to break off relations with Japan have now disappeared. Roumania and Bulgaria under pressure from His Majesty's Government and United States Government have set a good example in breaking off relations with Japan, and Soviet Government have made it clear, particularly at Moscow Conference, that they are not inclined to be tender towards Japan.

Rupture of Turco-Japanese relations would therefore offer many advantages and I am in favour of a combined Anglo-American request to the Turkish Government to take this step. This would be outside the scope of Anglo-Turkish alliance but could be based on desirability of the Turks making concrete contribution to Allied victory against Japan and thus helping to shorten world war. We could point out that apart from consideration described above Turkey lies not far off the route between Great Britain and the Far East and by rupture of relations with Japan could remove important

I do not consider that Turkey should at this stage be asked to declare war on Japan as I feel certain

Your letter of November 29th enclosing the paraphrase of a telegram dated November 24th from Mr. Eden to Lord Halifax has been received.

Your letter asks my views as to the desirability of requesting Turkey to sever diplomatic relations with Japan. After a survey of the situation in this Department we find that there are a number of considerations which would make such a break advantageous from the point of view of our over-all military operations and we know of no military disadvantage which would flow from Turkey taking this step. Accordingly, I would urge that the representations referred to by Mr. Eden should be made to the Turkish Government.

MEMORANDUM

Reference is made to the paraphrase of Mr. Eden's telegram of November 24 to Lord Halifax, handed to Mr. Alling of the Office of Near Eastern and African Affairs. Following consultation with the War and Navy Departments, the Department agrees that the representations suggested by Mr. Eden should be made to the Turkish Government with a view to the latter severing at the earliest possible date diplomatic relations with Japan.

The Department has telegraphed to Ambassador Steinhardt in Ankara authorization to act in concert with his British colleague, as soon as the latter receives similar instructions from the Foreign Office, and to take up this question with the Turkish authorities in the manner agreed between the two Ambassadors as being the most effective.

In connection with Sir Maurice Peterson's telegram of November 27, a copy of which was handed to Mr. Alling by Mr. Michael Wright on November 29, the Department does not believe the Turks will want to go so far as to declare war on Japan. However, if the Turks themselves wish to declare war, the Department sees no reason to discourage them.

1. The British Embassy handed the Department a paraphrase of a telegram from Mr. Eden to Lord Halifax dated November 24, which states that previous objections to the idea of requesting the Turkish Government to break relations with Japan have now disappeared. The message states that a good example has been set by Rumania and Bulgaria breaking relations with Japan under pressure from the British and American Governments and that the Soviet Government, particularly at the Moscow Conference, made it clear that the USSR was not inclined to be tender towards Japan. Eden adds that he favors a combined Anglo-American request to the Turkish Government to take this step, outside the scope of the Anglo-Turkish Alliance, but based on the desirability of Turkey helping to shorten the war by making a concrete contribution to the Allied victory against Japan. In closing Mr. Eden expresses the view that at this stage Turkey should not be asked to declare war on Japan because he feels certain that Turkey would refuse on the justified grounds that Turkey could make no contribution to operations against the Japanese.

2. This message was sent to the Secretary of War and to the Secretary of the Navy on November 29, with request for their views as to the desirability of asking Turkey to sever diplomatic relations with Japan.

In the circumstances the Department considers it most unlikely that the Turks will suggest this. Mr. Russell called on me at 3 o'clock this afternoon by appointment to show me a British Foreign Office telegram received by the British Embassy in connection with the above subject. He said that on receipt of the Department's memorandum, its contents had been telegraphed to the Foreign Office. In the message shown to me the Foreign Office only pronounced on the point first raised by Sir Maurice Peterson in Turkey, i.e., the Turks might wish to go further and declare war against Japan. The Foreign Office thought that a declaration of war with the Turks would serve no useful purpose militarily and "would be unlikely to gain the Turks any credit with the Russians".

Mr. Russell and I agreed that the latest Foreign Office telegram did not indicate what the Foreign Office proposed to do in connection with the most important issue - asking the Turks to sever diplomatic relations with Japan. Mr. Russell said that he would ask the Foreign Office to let them know the instructions being sent to the British Ambassador in Ankara in this connection. I showed Mr. Russell Ankara's 2389, December 20, 7 p.m. in which Steinhardt reports that the British Ambassador has not yet received instructions from the Foreign Office, but when these instructions are received, he and his British colleague have agreed that separately but on the same day they will take up with the Turks the question of severing diplomatic relations with Japan.

REDEPTS 10461, December 15, 7 p.m. (repeated to Moscow as Department's 2836) and Ankara's 81, December 20 to London (repeated to Moscow as Ankara's 5). Department has received December 26 telegram from Ankara reporting that Steinhardt and his British colleague called on Foreign Minister that date and left with him aide memoires substantially as follows:

QUOTE In suggesting to the Turkish Government that it sever diplomatic relations with Japan, the Government of the United States believes that the Turkish Government may desire to help shorten the war by making a concrete contribution to the Allied victory against Japan. advantage, the suggestion would be given most careful consideration by the Turkish Government. Foreign Minister inquired of Steinhardt as to Russian point of view and was told that while Steinhardt was without information as to USSR position, it was his personal opinion that USSR would see in severance of diplomatic relations between Turkey and Japan a decided advantage because Japs would be deprived of a vantage point for observation and espionage purposes at a time when movement of war material through the Straits to Russia was about to begin.

The Foreign Minister promised early reply and on December 30 informed Steinhardt that Turkish Government has decided to break off all diplomatic and economic relations with Japan, the Turkish aide memoire handed Steinhardt reading as follows:

QUOTE The Government of the Republic notes that the request of the Government of the United States is based on the consideration that such a rupture in constituting a concrete contribution by Turkey to the Allied victory in the Far East would have the effect of shortening the duration of the World War.

Foreign Minister said that he anticipated no difficulty in obtaining Grand National Assembly approval.

I called on the Minister for Foreign Affairs this morning to express to him the desirability of a severance of diplomatic relations between Turkey and Japan. I left with him an aide memoire drafted in agreement with the British Ambassador the English text of which reads as follows: "In suggesting to the Turkish Government that it sever diplomatic relations with Japan, the Government of the United States believes that the Turkish Government may desire to help shorten the war by making a concrete contribution to the Allied victory against Japan. At the same time, such a severance of diplomatic relations would have the effect of depriving the Japanese of important points of observation of Allied operations".

Saka stated that without predetermining the reply his Government might make he could see little advantage to Turkey in taking the desired step but that if "Turkey's allies" believed such action would be to ~~advantage he was certain his government would~~ their ~~ad~~(*)ould give the most careful consideration to the suggestion.

He then inquired as to the Russian point of view. I said that while I had no (repeat no) information as to the Russian position, it was my personal opinion that the Russians would see a decided advantage in a severance of diplomatic relations between Turkey and Japan as it would deprive the Japanese of a vantage point for espionage and observation purposes particularly at a time when the movement of war material to Russia through the straits was imminent. Saka said he would discuss the matter with the Prime Minister at the earliest possible moment and that there would be no unreasonable delay in the reply of the Turkish Government.

The British Ambassador is seeing Saka this afternoon to take the matter up with him and will leave with him en aide memoire substantially

The Minister of Foreign Affairs asked me to call this morning and after informing me that the Turk Government has decided to break off all economic and diplomatic relations with Japan handed me an aide memoire which in translation reads as follows:

"The Turk Government has taken note of the aide memoir which the Ambassador of the United States of America on instructions from his Government was good enough to hand the Minister of Foreign Affairs on DECEMBER 27 concerning a rupture by Turkey of its diplomatic relations with Japan.

"The Government of the Republic notes that the request of the Government of the United States is based on the consideration that such a rupture in constituting concrete combination by Turkey to the Allied victory in the Far East would have the effect of shortening the duration of the World War.

"Thus this Government which ardently desires the rapid and complete victory of the Allies has decided to submit during the session the question of the rupture of its diplomatic and economic relations with Japan to the approval of the Grand National Assembly. Dated Ankara December 30."

Saka indicated that he did not anticipate any difficulty in obtaining the approval of the Grand National Assembly to the proposed rupture of relations with Japan (Reference my 2421 ^{161.94 / 12-2844} December 28).

SUBJECT: Severance of Diplomatic Relations Between Turkey and Japan.

PARTICIPANTS: Mr. John Russell, British Embassy.
Mr. Jones, NE.

COPIES TO:

GPO 1-1493

Mr. Russell called on me this afternoon and left with me the attached telegram from the Foreign Office to Lord Halifax. It will be noted that the British Ambassador in Ankara is instructed to act in concert with the American Ambassador in requesting the Turks to sever relations with Japan. (Note: The request, we understand, was made December 28.)

The Foreign Office telegram makes an interesting reference to the possibility that Turkey "might have a sneaking sympathy for Japan as a future make-weight to Russia".
